Logo Variations

Primary Logo

Color Usage

Pink primary one color logo on white background, or on top of photos.

White one color logo used on top of pink background to bring in pink. Can be used with pink gradient background, and on top of photos.

Clear Space

Always keep a minimum clear space equal to the size of the binder ring around the logo to ensure clear space consistency as the logo is proportionally resized and prevents other graphic elements from competing with it and lessening its impact.

Secondary Logos

The bullhead only logos may be used as small footer logo on pages. Vertical logos with brand name may be used where primary horizontal logo will not serve purpose. Abide by all other guidelines for size and color usage.

Fonts

Avenir Black typeface provides a strong headline, while still inviting a light feel to the page. Avenir Light is great for subheadings, and Helvetica Light to serve as the body. Body preferrably justified with last line aligned left.

Headings	Avenir Black
Subheadings	Avenir Light
Body	Helvetica Light

Color Palette

Primary Palette

To preserve an inviting energy, keep it simple by using these primary palette colors throughout media. The pink is a part of our branding and logo, and therefore may be used for headings and subheadings to keep branding a part of the page design, as well as a background for headers or footers. This pink may also be used as a stroke for white headings.

White may be used as text in front of pink backgrounds for headings, subheadings, and body; or as the background color. White may also have a pink stroke as heading if it is on a white background for extra design element.

Charcoal is used for headings, subheadings, and for body on white backgrounds. Avoid using black, as black text will make pages and design look more aggressive.

Secondary Palette

This secondary palette focuses on complimentary colors that can be used through media formats, and not for text. This includes photos, videos, and graphic design. The light blue and blue may come from the sky and clouds, or from plastic wrap on furniture pieces. These blues lighten up the branding, and look great next to the brand's pink.

The light green may come from palm trees and other forms of nature. From natural lighting, this is a great accent to media formats.

Do not use the secondary palette for headings, subheadings, and text.
